UNDERPERFORM (2)

We expect Auckland Airport (AIA) will report a flattish 1H20 result on 20 February 2020, characterised by a slowdown in revenue growth given weaker international passenger growth and lower aeronautical charges. In response we expect evidence of operating expense control. In light of the coronavirus outbreak, passenger (pax) growth will be impacted in 2H20; therefore we see downside risk to the company's NPAT guidance band (NZ$265m-NZ$275m), which is already pressured by softer than anticipated pax growth through 1H20.

Key issues to consider at AIA's FY20 result

- Pax growth outlook: AIA experienced a -0.5% decline in international pax excluding transits for the five months to November. It reports December traffic statistics on 19 February, which we expect will show a mild improvement in light of robust Air New Zealand international performance. However, the outlook for 2H20 will be depressed. A reduction in Chinese capacity will bite - each month that capacity is cut to all Chinese airports impacts the half yearly total international seat capacity for AIA by ~-1.3%.
- Opex control: In light of slower earnings growth, we expect management has applied greater cost control across its opex buckets. In particular marketing, promotions and professional costs. Staff cost pressure should also ease given the share price hiatus.
- Capex: AIA is due to update investors on its capex development pipeline in light of a more subdued pax growth backdrop and the withdrawal of Jetstar from the regional market. The 1H20 result may be too early for this and we may need to wait until the investor day, which was deferred from November last year.

Investment Summary

Auckland Airport (AIA) is New Zealand's premier airport and provides Air New Zealand with a domestic and international hub. It is very profitable given strong concession based commercial assets. It is part way through a major 10-year plus capex programme, which will facilitate longer term growth. Despite the support from attractive return on capital in AIA's non-regulated commercial assets and low prevailing Government bond rates, its valuation is stretched. Moreover earnings risk is to the downside, in our opinion. UNDERPERFORM.

Business quality

- Hub-airport: AIA is New Zealand's key international gateway and accounts for ~90% of all long-haul passengers (pax) arriving in New Zealand. Its available land provides scope to increase capacity over the next 30+ years.
- Multi-pronged strategy: AIA has three key income streams (i) aeronautical (regulated); (ii) commercial, which incorporates retail and car parking; and (iii) development property.
- Track record: AIA has created value in recent years through route development activities, expanding its retail footprint to optimise passenger spend and concession rates, and developing property.

Earnings and cashflow outlook

- Slower phase of earnings: The growth outlook for the next three years is impacted by subdued aeronautical income and reversion to mean for pax growth after a recent boom. Earnings growth should accelerate from FY23.
- Aeronautical income: AIA resets its aeronautical prices every five years which are subject to regulatory oversight from the Commerce Commission (ComCom). The current price path prescribes subdued aeronautical income growth through to FY22.

Financial structure

- Balance sheet: AIA is in the midst of a major capex bulge given the need to build capacity. AIA expects to spend ~NZ$3.0bn over the next five years.
- Dividends: It has a 100% dividend pay-out rate and has a dividend reinvestment plan in place.

Risk factors

- Rising bond yields: AIA trades as a bond proxy. Its valuation holds a very strong inverse relationship with bond yields.
- Regulatory risk: We expect AIA to lower current aeronautical prices to ease any regulatory pressure given its mixed ComCom report last year.
